Please advise me if you think any particular grading seems very inaccurate and I will investigate.

If the majority are reasonable, I will use these gradings in place of my original estimates and go through the whole process again.

The second set of gradings will not vary very much from the first - I hope! If they prove fairly constant it should be safe to use the second set of gradings on lists A and B to form the basis of the first list for publication.

- Notes 1. The gradings in list A are as accurate as can be expected from the system adopted.
2. In list B some gradings could be inaccurate but in most cases should be within 5 points either way.
3. In list C the gradings are approximate and are really only useful for future calculations.
4. A list D, which contains the names of 72 players who have played insufficient games, has not been typed.
5. On the attached page I have integrated the A, B, and C lists and I would imagine that the first published list will be on similar lines. It could be in alphabetical order which could prove less embarrassing for those at the bottom of the list.
